

Gordon McBean
Professor, Director of Policy Studies,
Institute for Catastrophic Loss Reduction
The University of Western Ontario

Gordon McBean is a Professor and Director of Policy Studies at the Institute for Catastrophic Loss Reduction at the University of Western Ontario. He specializes in climate, weather and environmental issues. Presently he is a chair or member of several international and national committees on natural hazards, climate studies and related issues. From 1994-2000, he was an Assistant Deputy Minister in Environment Canada, responsible for weather, climate, air quality science and services. Before that, he was a Professor of atmospheric and oceanographic sciences at the University of British Columbia.