

Steve Glickman
Director, Business Growth & Retention
London Economic Development Corporation

Steve Glickman is the Director, Business Growth and Retention at the London Economic Development Corporation, and has been with LEDC since 1999. Steve works exclusively for London businesses, and is dedicated to offering Information, Advice and Assistance to ensure they are successful and remain in London.

Steve earned his B.Sc. in Mathematics at McGill University, in Montreal, Quebec. He began his career at IBM as a Programmer, Systems Designer and Manager in Education, then moved to KPMG in Montreal as a Management Consultant, specializing in Management Information Systems.

Steve's passion for high end/audio video systems took him into Audio Retailing, and since 1977, has been, and still is, the co-founder and co-owner of London Audio.

Steve is actively involved in the community, and has drawn on his contacts and partnerships to connect businesses to potential alliances, customers and suppliers at an international, national, provincial or local level.

Steve actively volunteers his time on not-for-profit Boards. Currently he sits on the London area Boards of Directors of Junior Achievement and Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters. Previous appointments include being Board Chair of King's University College and member of the Board and Advisory Council of Orchestra London.
